Did You Know?

Almost 70% of people turning age 65 today will need some type of long-term care in the future. The average length of time people need care is 3 years.¹

One-third of people may never need long-term care, but 20% will need it for longer than 5 years. On average women need 3.7 years of care while men need 2.2 years.²

In 2024, the average cost for 3 years of long-term care in Connecticut is $577,704 ($192,568/year). That cost is projected to be $1.15 million ($383,169/year) in 2044.³

Does Medicare Cover Long-Term Care?

No. Medicare does not cover long-term care (custodial care). This type of care makes up more than 90% of all long-term care services. Examples of custodial care is when you need help with walking, bathing, eating, dressing or using the toilet. This is what people need most when they have a physical impairment from a stroke. Or, due to cognitive impairment from dementia or Alzheimer's disease. Don't make the mistake of thinking Medicare covers long-term care costs. It doesn't.

Further, about 80% of care at home is provided by unpaid caregivers. With more than half of this care including intensive caregiving assistance with personal care such as bathing or feeding.⁴ And it's not only seniors that need long-term care. Over 35 percent of people currently receiving care are between the ages of 18 and 64.⁵

When To Buy Long-Term Care Insurance

Like most advisors, we recommend buying long-term care insurance in your fifties or early sixties for the following reasons:

- The younger you are when you buy a policy, the lower the annual premiums.
- Even though you pay premiums a longer period of time, you'll typically pay less overall than someone buying at an older age.
- By the time you reach your mid sixties, you're more likely to have a medical condition that makes you ineligible for a preferred-health discount, or makes it tough to get coverage at all.

So it almost never pays to wait. And, while you're waiting, you're uninsured. If an accident or illness happens causing you to need long-term care, you'll have to pay out of pocket.

Understand LTC Partnership Plans

Connecticut Partnership for Long-Term Care

Connecticut Partnership for Long-Term Care policies are available. Partnership policies combine private long-term care insurance with Medicaid asset protection. Only Partnership policies provide this type of asset protection when you need Nursing Home, Assisted Living or Home Care.

The unique asset protection benefits of a Connecticut Partnership for Long-Term Care policy apply if your long term care needs last longer than the benefits of your Partnership policy.

For every dollar your Connecticut LTC Partnership policy pays in benefits, a dollar of assets is protected from the long term care Medicaid asset limit. The protected assets are also exempt from Estate Recovery in the same amount as the benefits paid by your Connecticut Partnership LTC policy.

Note that hybrid long-term care insurance plans are not available under the Connecticut Partnership for Long-Term Care. We compare both types of plans for you to help you decide which is best for you.

Connecticut Partnership Reciprocity

The Reciprocity Compact ensures that any state in the Compact provides Medicaid Asset Protection to Partnership policyholders from any other state in the Compact.

Under the Reciprocity Compact, Connecticut Partnership policyholders moving to another state may qualify for dollar-for-dollar Medicaid Asset Protection, like Connecticut's Medicaid program. To be eligible, the policyholder must apply to and qualify under the new state's Medicaid program and both states must be part of the Reciprocity Compact. States can opt in and out of the Compact, so the list of participating states may change and the decision to buy a Partnership policy should not be based on reciprocity.
